General observations	When making and executing investment decision, Kyma traders are required to act in good faith and in the best interests of their clients. With respect to execution, this is achieved by taking all sufficient steps, as required under the FCA rules, to obtain the best possible result for the clients, taking into account the relative important of the execution factors outlined below. Kyma monitors the effectiveness of its order execution arrangements to identify and, where necessary, corrects any deficiencies. There were no deficiencies identified during the reporting period. No single counterparty is favoured compared to others, unless it can be demonstrated that such a counterparty consistently provides a superior service, which would include, for example, providing better pricing, liquidity or speed of execution than its competitors. There were no material changes to Kyma's execution arrangements during the reporting period.
	Summary of analysis	Conclusion
Execution factors	A number of execution factors may be considered depending on the transaction and the market in question. These may include: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1) Price; 2) Speed; 3) Likelihood of execution, settlement; 4) Costs; 5) Size and nature of the order; and 6) Any other consideration relevant to the order. The execution of the trades related to the acquisition is a small part of the investment process and it may take several weeks to purchase the instruments in extremely illiquid markets. As a consequence of the detailed investment process and the volume of trading, the likelihood of execution of the order(s) in the vast majority of trades is the most important execution factor.	During the period under review, Kyma's overarching execution process was based on these execution factors and criteria as detailed in the Firm's Order Execution Policy. When executing transactions Kyma will generally weight execution factors in order of priority based on the asset class in question and the prevailing market conditions, all of which may be subject to changes depending on the execution criteria at the time of the transaction. It should be noted that as the ability to execute is the most important factor, there may only be relationships with a small number of high quality brokers that can provide the liquidity.
